We trust everyone noted a paragraph in Marquis Child's column yesterday about a report in the London Observer on CIA Director Allen Dulles. The Observer said publicly what Childs noted is being said in Washington, only privately: that the CIA runs its own foreign policy in many parts of the world, especially in Laos and Egypt, and has been sending U-2 flights over China from bases in Formosa.

We also trust there was some attention given an AP item yesterday reporting that Peking had issued its 100th "serious warning" to the U. S. against "military provocation" and that Red batteries had subjected Quemoy to the heaviest shelling in three months.

Any questions regarding a possible connection between the two items should be directed to the White House. All we know at the moment is the little we find in the papers. But we have an uneasy feeling that it won't be long before there will be much more to read on the subject, that it will not be pleasant, and that somebody will be asking why we weren't told before that something was going on.
